“Frederick Douglass taught that literacy is the path from slavery to freedom. There are many kinds of slavery and many kinds of freedom. But reading is still the path.”

Dear Jamie

Thank you for everything your funny accent, the encouraging stories you told like the “Grand Archer.” You are one of the best and funniest leaders ever.

My favourite activity was the Giant Swing. It was great how you persistently encouraged everyone and that it’s all about having a personal best. My favourite part of the Giant Swing was pulling the cord and then falling; the adrenaline rush is amazing.

My second favourite activity was the Dual Flying Fox for sure. The moment when you jump off the edge is scary but then, when the flying fox catches you, the view is amazing. The best was racing your friends, it’s hectic and the feeling of putting your trust into the equipment which was quite scary.

My third favourite was definitely Rock Climbing. The Rock Climbing was also quite scary because you have to put your trust into the equipment and your friends! It was exhilarating though. Do you know the first thing I did? I set myself a personal best, which was halfway and guess what? I made it halfway and a little bit further.

Over all, they were the best experiences of my life. Even sitting around the log fire was pretty cool toasting marshmallows. Let’s not forget the County Fair, oh boy, was that fun!

Sincerely,

Lachlan
(aka “I’m Batman”)

Students, inspired by their experiences, wrote letters to their Camp instructors. Well done, Lachlan
